

The #1 Fastest Way To Make Money Online

Just starting out online? Want to know the absolute quickest way to begin making your Internet fortune?

SELL OP PRODUCTS!!

What are OP products?

Why, "Other People's" products, of course. You've heard of using OPM (Other People's Money) to bootstrap your way into a successful business. Well, this is a lot like it, except there is very little money required to get started.

Where To Find OP Products

You can find OP products all over the web, but quality products are only available at a handful of locations. When you sell OP products, you are acting as an affiliate.

What's an affiliate? An affiliate is a product reseller. In a nutshell, you will be selling OP (Other People's) products and you'll receive a percentage of the sale price as your commission.

Here are the best Affiliate websites with quality products for you to sell:

- ClickBank
- PayDotCom.com
- Linkshare.com
- Amazon.com
- Ebay.com
- Google Adsense
- Commission Junction

These sites offer a variety of products that will easily fit your website's theme. Each affiliate program pays a little differently, but if you click on the links above, you will be able to see just what the commission structures look like.

Recommended:

I highly recommend ClickBank because as an affiliate there, you can get up to 75% of the sale price as your commission! Product prices range anywhere from $5 to over $100, so your commissions can potentially be quite high.

PayDotCom is the next highest in payouts, followed by Linkshare and Commission Junction.

Linkshare pays varying amounts depending on the offer you sell, but they also pay for simple clicks or just information signups, as well as actual sales. That means you are able to make money just by sending your blog or website visitors to the product signup page!

Commission Junction is similar to Linkshare in the way it works and how much it pays.

Note: Linkshare and Commission Junction's vendors can be a little particular about the content on your website. What this means is... it's up to each vendor whether you will be allowed to sell certain products. So, you might have to wait until your website has built-up some solid content or has gained some popularity before some of these affiliate programs will be available to you. However, it certainly doesn't hurt to sign up and try anyway.

AdSense is a Google product that allows you to put relevant ads on your website or blog. When one of your visitors clicks on a Google ad on your site you get a small portion of whatever amount the advertiser has paid Google for placing that ad.

Ebay, Amazon and AdSense pay the least compared to the other affiliate sites mentioned above, but if you get a lot of traffic on your blog or website, these programs can increase your monthly profits by hundreds of dollars or more. So you won't want to overlook them.

And The Best Thing Is...

The best thing about all of these affiliate programs is they are free for you to join! Be advised that some of them require you to have a website or blog already created. That's because they give you HTML code to place on your site to display their ads. Some also will want to review your site to see if it's relevant to their product.

However, both Clickbank and PayDotCom.com let you become an affiliate for any product without reviewing your site.

How To Get Started Selling...

To get started, you'll need a website or blog to list the products you will be selling. A blog is easier to manage than a website, so unless you know HTML well enough to create your own website, I suggest you start with a simple blog at Blogger.com or Wordpress.com. It's very easy to make a new blog and it's free too!

What Your Blog / Website Will Do

Here's what you'll be doing on your blog or website... You'll be providing useful information in the form of short articles about some aspect of the theme you selected for your site. Within those articles you will promote affiliate products that are relevant to your readers.

Bottom line, you will be selling OP (Other People's) products which you will mention in your articles or blog posts. Ideally, these references will be cleverly interspersed within the content of your website. You make money from the commissions you receive when your site visitors click on your affiliate links and purchase the OP products you've recommended.

Summary:

So, to make money selling OP (Other People's) products, here's what you do:

1. Pick a theme. Check out the product categories at the above affiliate websites and decide what the theme of your website or blog will be based upon what interests you and what's available to sell.

It's important that you choose a theme that corresponds very closely with the OP products you plan to sell. If you don't or if you list too many diverse products, you will just confuse your visitors, at best. At worst, they simply will not be very interested in the affiliate products you sell on your blog or website. That means few or no commissions for you.

2. Once you pick a theme,
 - create your blog or website,
 - give it an appropriate name using relevant theme-related keywords in the name,
 - write a 200-300 word introduction to place on the first page of your site. Make sure you mention the theme of the site, peppering your introduction with relevant keywords.

NOTE: Keywords and keyword phrases are very important! Search engines will use them to list your site in their search results so potential buyers can find your site.

3. Sign-up for the affiliate programs of your choice and enter the code for their ads on your site. You can start with the one or two affiliate programs that best fit your site's topic. Most affiliate programs will give you the HTML code to include in your website or blog.

Be sure to check the affiliate program for any restrictions and limitations on ad placement. The above mentioned programs have few placement rules except for AdSense, so read the AdSense rules carefully if you are using AdSense.

4. Write articles or blog posts about specific problems your readers might have and casually mention or recommend a few related affiliate products (use your affiliate link, of course) that will help them overcome the problems.

Continue to write articles or blog posts (at least one per week) citing benefits to your readers, how to overcome problems, how to do something they might want done, etc. In your posts, be sure to recommend affiliate products that will supply those benefits, solve those problems or help them accomplish their goals.

Remember, always stress the benefits of any affiliate product, NOT just its features!

5. After that, it's just a matter of getting traffic to your website or blog... (see recommendation below.)
